Inmates at the Rapid City Community Work Center recently donated $352 to The Black Hills Children's Home as the result of an inmate pizza fundraiser January 29, 2021.

The Black Hills Children's Home is part of the Children's Home Society of South Dakota. It is a psychiatric residential treatment center and education school for children, ages 4-14, with severe emotional and behavioral needs. Many of the children are victims of domestic violence, neglect, and emotional, physical and sexual abuse. The Children's Home Society also partners with caring parents to serve children with emotional or behavioral needs. Most children are discharged from CHS/BHCH into a family setting including birth parents, relative placements, a foster family or an adoptive family. All funds received through donation are used for the children in the treatment center and to help with clothing the children and helping with the families learning how to manage the children.

The Lakota, Dakota and Nakota (LDN) inmate group at the State Penitentiary donated the money, which originally was earmarked for a powwow at SDSP. But the powwow was cancelled due to COVID-19 and the LDN group wanted the money to benefit others. The Children's Inn provides free services to victims of domestic violence, stalking, elder abuse, sexual assault and child abuse or neglect.

Along with the monetary donation, Children's Inn received a painting of a woman and child done by an anonymous Native American inmate.
