Plan Ahead for Large Projects

We recently had to turn down a bid for a very large project because we did not have enough time to complete it by the required completion date. We could have done the project and at a lower price but there just wasn't enough time.

Since our mission is to prepare men and women for re-entry into their communities, we are constantly training new workers as more experienced ones are paroled or released. Due to that continual training and our commitment to quality workmanship, we need more time to complete projects than shops that have trained and experienced workers all the time.

So if you have a project in the planning stages, give us a call early to see if we have the capability and time to complete the project for you.

Our new product for the month is the "Dust Bonnet". This replacement for traditional (and expensive) commercial dust mops may not be much to look at, but it is a great low-cost alternative that gets the job done. Constructed from terry cloth, backed with recycled buffer pads and held firmly in place with elastic, it slips over your existing dust mop frames. It will replace 95% of the uses that conventional braided mops have, plus it does a better job of picking up fine dust (There is a reason you see terry cloth towels under dust mops to clean up a basketball court at half time!). Compare our price with what you are paying now and give us a try.

Hail and Farewell Welcome

With the new year comes a changing of the guard at the Print Shop and Book Bindery. After a career of work in prison industries, Burl Watne has decided to retire at the end of January. Good luck and thanks to Burl for his many years of dedicated service.

Taking over the reins from Burl is Chad Rotert. After many years working security at the penitentiary, he left his post as a lieutenant to start a new career as shop foreman. Please give him a call and welcome him to the team. You can still contact Chad through the same shop number and mailing address, but there is a new e-mail address- Chad.Rotert@state.sd.us
